Your Excellency,

Fomusoh Ivo Feh was about to start university when he was arrested by six men in plain clothes at Mile Four Limbe, in the South-West region of Cameroon on 13 December 2014. He was 25 years old at the time. His arrest followed a sarcastic text message that he sent to a friend, Azah Levis Gob, who also shared it with his friend, Afuh Nivelles Nfor, who was a student in secondary school.

In January 2016, an investigating judge of the Military Court concluded that there was sufficient evidence for all three accused to stand trial before the Yaoundé Military Court on terrorism-related charges. They were convicted to 10 years in prison on 2 November 2016. A military court upheld the sentences against Ivo and his two friends during an appeal hearing on 15 March 2018. Ivo's lawyer filed an appeal at the Supreme Court in July 2018. But the Supreme Court is yet to give any direction on the matter and a date for a hearing is yet to be set.

I respectfully urge you to immediately and unconditionally release Fomusoh Ivo Feh and his two friends, Afuh Nivelles Nfor and Azah Levis Gob, as they should have never been detained or convicted.

Yours sincerely,
